++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Sunny spells developing but also scattered heavy, possibly thundery, showers.

Today:
A rather cloudy start with showers, especially in the northeast and southwest. Cloud breaking to allow more in the way of sunny spells to develop by afternoon but also a scattering of heavy, possibly thundery showers. Feeling a little warmer.

Tonight:
Showers, some heavy, dying out by midnight to leave a mostly dry night with occasional clear spells and perhaps a few mist patches by dawn.

Thursday:
A warmer day for most with sunny spells and fewer showers, although some may be quite heavy in the south and east. Light winds.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Sunny spells and showers for Friday, though many areas dry. Showers, heavy and thundery in places, develop Saturday and Sunday; more persistent rain in the south at first Saturday.
